Top new developments are ideally positioned for staying in the city or heading on a careful vacation

After months of limiting our comings and goings, many New Yorkers are surely itching for a vacation right about now. However, travel in the time of coronavirus is a bit complicated. A total of 35 U.S. states and territories meet the criteria for a required 14-day quarantine from the time of the last contact; even for those not on the list, traveling by plane or train is sure to be a nerve-wracking experience.

But that is not to say that fall getaways are cancelled like so many other events. Quite the contrary - New York's fall foliage is nearing peak conditions, and farms and towns in upstate New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut are rich in outdoor activities for children and adults alike.

The following new condo developments are well situated near major roads leading in and out of New York, making weekend getaways a snap. However, between abundant amenities and addresses near city parks and attractions, a staycation would hardly go amiss!
